8. The draft Decree amending Decree No 152/2009 of 12 November of the Ministry of Agriculture and Rural Development on the mandatory requirements of the Codex Alimentarius Hungaricus updates the Hungarian Food Code with a new regulation on pickles. The aim of the national regulation is to provide consumers with adequate information on the quality of pickles and to clarify what product, in terms of nature and quality, the name of these foodstuffs refers to.

9. By supplementing the Codex Alimentarius Hungaricus with this regulation on pickles:

- the product group of pickled vegetables and fruits has been defined, within which the different designations based on the cutting of the plant parts and their variety have also been regulated;
- in accordance with the applied acidification process it is clearly indicated what designation may be used for products made by natural acidification and for those produced by artificial acidification;
- the unique quality characteristics of two pickled products that are significant in terms of domestic consumption and traditions, namely gherkins and sauerkraut, have been specified.
