12. The listing of the substances listed in the Schedule of Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances aims to limit their wider dissemination and availability, as they pose a serious threat to public health. No clinical studies have been conducted on most of the substances in humans and their behaviour in the body, and their degree of effect, and safety profile are unknown. Also, the origin, exact composition, and degree of purity of the products containing these substances generally remain unknown. Users of these substances have, inter alia, a serious risk of overdosing on the substances, as the so-called 'safe doses' are unknown.
